

Co-hosted by the Capacity Seminar Series and the School of Nursing Research Toolbox Series

Date: Wednesday, April 3, 2024, from 12pm – 1pm (rescheduled from March 6)

Title of presentation: A to Z's and Beyond of Research Grant Navigation: Application to Study Completion

Summary: Whether you are an early career researcher, a new faculty member, making pathways to enter academia, or somewhere in between, financing and managing your emerging program of research is a topic requiring planning ahead and mapping out of processes. In this discussion between Dr. Vicky Bungay and Postdoctoral Research Fellow, Dr. Shahin Kassam, two core areas are examined: (i) preparing for grant submission, and (ii) managing a successful grant. Engaging with each other's grant development and management experiences, this discussion will follow a journey that highlights core considerations for grant preparation. It also moves through management of a successful grant including finance, human resources, and knowledge creation. From discussing practical strategies to engaging with thoughtful processes, this presentation is a pragmatic exploration of iteratively traversing through the A to Z's of research grants and the "now-what's" of putting that grant into action.

Co-presenter Bio(s):

Dr. Vicky Bungay is a Canada Research Chair Tier II in Gender, Equity, and Community Engagement, Professor with the School of Nursing at the University of British Columbia, and Scientific Director of the Capacity Research Unit. Her work tackles strategies for effective community engagement to advance health and social care for women affected by violence. She has an extensive research program and holds over $8.2 million in research grants that include scholarship specifically to the intersections between gender-based violence and psychological, physical, and emotional well-being and innovative trauma-informed service delivery to address unmet health needs of women living in poverty.

Dr. Shahin Kassam is Postdoctoral Research Fellow at the Capacity Research Unit in the UBC School of Nursing. Shahin's emerging program of research centers on women living with the impacts and health sequelae of forced migration including gender-based violence, social exclusion, and racial discrimination. Shahin engages in community-based research approaches that collaboratively advance engagement between health and migration sectors. During her fellowship, Shahin has thus far managed a SSHRC Partnership Engagement Grant, a UBC School of Nursing Lyle Creelman Endowment Fund, and a Michael Smith Health BC Research Trainee Award.
